About Michael Judd

Michael Judd is the Principal Designer of Ecologia Design in Frederick, MD, designer of the garden at the restaurant, Volt, and author of Edible Landscaping with a Permaculture Twist. Growing up between northern England and the Appalachian mountains of Maryland, Michael's roots have been branched with diverse landscapes and fertile culture. Mix in a decade of running a grass roots non-profit in rural Latin America, heading up an arid lands research project in the desert of SE Spain, and extensive study at the New York Botanic Garden you end up with an eclectic designer that melds form, function, and productivity seamlessly. Today Michael remains in the Frederick area where he and his wife Ashley and son Wyatt live at Long Creek Homestead in a spectacular circular strawbale home in the center of extensive landscapes that push the realities of design to new levels.
